

ABSTRACT

An acupuncture needle warmer device comprises a flat watertight plastic container filled with supersaturated solution, the container having a closed folded position and an open position, a

- 5 fold line defined upon the container body wherein the container body can fold on the fold line to snugly enclose a handle of an acupuncture needle in the closed folded position, and an exothermic crystallization trigger located within the container body, triggerable by manual depression.